SEA-RUN
BROWN
TROUT

RÍO GRANDE
ARGENTINA

KAU TAPEN LODGE

Kau Tapen was the first fishing lodge on the Río Grande. In its 32nd year of continuous operation, it remains the most elegant, offering guests single rooms which guarantee privacy and comfort. Kau Tapen means “house of fishing” in the Ona language. Here, in the heart of the Río Grande, are the best pools on the river, pools that have produced five of the seven current world records for sea-run trout. Kau Tapen also provides more miles of water per angler than any other lodge on this river. You’ll fish most days with the wind at your back and over your shoulder for prime casting angles, while short walks and shallow wading are the norm. Single or two-handed rods are both effective. Skate a bomber over a resting lie, or drift a nymph next to a cut bank for sea-run trout you’ve only seen in your dreams.

THE RIVER HAS PRODUCED SEVEN WORLD RECORDS -SO FAR

At Kau Tapen we catch 20 pound trout each week, how many lodges on the planet can make that claim and have 31 years of written log books to prove it? Darned few. An elegant retreat for anglers that has been visited by presidents, statesmen and serious sea-trout anglers since the early 80's and it just keeps getting better and better. Kau Tapen is setting the standard to which all other lodges aspire.

SLEEP COMES EASY AFTER SPECTACULAR FISHING DAYS

Stretch out, relax and find solitude or pour a glass of wine and gather with friends in the spacious living area. Imaginative menus and Argentina's finest wines ensure satisfaction at every meal. Greatness is in the details and at Kau Tapen no detail is overlooked.

VILLA MARÍA LODGE

Villa Maria is so close to the salt you can taste it, which means first crack at sea trout muscling up the Río Grande. Seagulls whirl overhead, while chrome fish lurk beneath the water's surface. You'll target both banks, where big pools and double-handed rods are the norm. The fish are hot and heavy, with 20-pound trout tearing downstream and racking up frequent flyer miles, while "fish of a lifetime" are landed each week. The lodge is reminiscent of many of the world's best salmon camps: warm, cozy, with cuisine and service at a very high level. Guides know the river inside and out, while days are spent on the water with classic huts available for midday breaks.

LODGE

Worlds away from the hustle and bustle, in a remote corner of Chile, is where you'll find Futa Lodge. The only tweets here are sent by birds, and oxen still ply the lonely roads hauling straw and firewood to remote outposts. Fishing here begins with the Futaleufú, which is "big river" translated from the Tehuelche tongue. The Futaleufú plays host to browns, rainbows, as well as the occasional sea run species. There are hidden tributaries, ponds and lakes, all within easy reach of the lodge. Choose Futa for a lost-in-time river experience.

"My stay was excellent in all ways! The staff was outstanding, very warm people, and a pleasure to be with. The lodge is very pretty as well. The shooting was magnificent and overall, the total experience could not have been better. Many thanks!"

THE FUTURE CONSERVATION

Around the world, fisheries are under threat. Development continues to encroach on wilderness areas. Climate change is affecting oceans and river habitats. And over-fishing has taken a toll on our finite fish species. Therefore, as fly-fishing business operators, we have a responsibility to not only protect these resources, but to help preserve them for many generations to come.

These goals manifest themselves in several ways.

From the Bahamas to Argentina and beyond, all Nervous Waters operations abide by a strict catch-and-release ethos implemented by guides and taught to clients. Whether it's a sea-run brown or spectacular bone, all fish caught are carefully handled and quickly released in order to promote health and propagation of the population.

In addition, we contribute to local economies in remote parts of the planet by educating communities on the long-term values of sustainable fisheries practices. We are proud supporters of the Bonefish & Tarpon Trust and its efforts to conserve saltwater species and flats habitats in the Bahamas. We also give to the Atlantic Salmon Federation, a nonprofit dedicated to this formidable game fish.

In Tierra del Fuego, our ongoing sea trout studies, spearheaded by professional biologists since 2011, explore how proper fish-handling practices play into the overall health of the fishery. At Pira Lodge, located in the heart of the Ibera Wetlands of Corrientes, Argentina, we're also teaming with National Park staff using GPS technology to tag and track dorado.

Ultimately, by monitoring the well-being and productivity of our dorado and anadromous trout treasures, we're striving to become better stewards of the resource.

If you value quality fisheries like we do—and a tomorrow of extraordinary fishing on Argentina's Río Grande, in the Bahamas, and throughout the Ibera ecosystem—please contact us to learn more about how you can contribute to the effort.

Taking care.

Over 40 years ago, Patagonia's first environmental grant was given to a river restoration group, and we've been supporting fish-specific causes ever since. We believe angling and conservation go hand in hand, and we've given over $13 million to grassroots organizations working to protect wild fish and their habitats around the world. To us, fly fishing isn't about taking—it's about taking care.
